Foreword Even today, whenever I recall the memories of 5th July, 1999, I thank God for having selected me to accomplish this sacred mission of service towards my beloved nation and fellow human beings, thus, providing me an opportunity to find and fulfill meanings of my life. Intense war with Pakistan was going on that day and the Tiger Hill, our pride possession was still in the occupied control of Pakistan. After fighting for 22 days at Tololing with the enemy and unfurling our National Flag there after winning the battle, I was sent to Tiger Hill with my soldier companions. As a disciplined soldier of the Indian Army, I was thrilled and enthusiastic to undertake this mission and felt overtly anxious to regain the control of Tiger Hill. The time to enthusiasm, value and courage had finally arrived. At the height of 16,500 feet in trembling cold conditions that could have had frozen blood, we started to climb on a very steep cliff. In this research, six of my seven companions have fought courageously and have become martyrs. I, the last man on his feet, too deeply injured, had already taken three shots in my body, seriously injured and tormented, but the spirit of dedication and determination did not dampen even for a moment, so he did not feel pain from anyone part. Somehow I managed to attack the Pakistani soldiers by pressing a grenade that killed four enemies. I am not yet able to remember where I could collect this strength to perform that company, but I can certainly say, at that time, I only had a solitary purpose, a motive, and the passion to protect the glory of my beloved nation - Bharat Mata. The date of my wedding was set on May 5, 1999 and I had reached Draas with my unit 18 grenadiers on May 20, 1999. At the age of 19, I not only had the opportunity to fight the war, but I am He was also honored with the highest gallantry prize of our nation, Param Veer Chakra - which was a historical moment of my life. That moment added a completely new dimension to my life. Every moment of this war is still impressed in my eyes. Like our courageous soldiers not only have they claimed every centimeter of our land from the deception nearby, but they also showed the world that however tired the circumstances may be, in any difficult position, the Indian army is quite capable of protecting the our country. When I was deeply injured, the same thoughts passed through the mind and I remembered that at the service of Bharat Desh, Bhagat Singh, Rajguru and Sukhdev had sacrificed their lives to 23 odnecaf odnecaf ehcna esseap li ottortp onaveva insaidni reirreug i, arreug ingo ni e ireirreug idnarg id arret otats 'A iloces rep ,esseap ortson li ,eugnais id 'op nu otasrev aneppa oveva, otnorfnoc ni sacrifices. sacrifices. In a way, I didn't exhibit anything unique but have just followed the high standards of morale and ideals set by those martyrs. Every place in India, however tiny it may be, has many stories of the sacrificing warriors. I am happy that Rishi Raj ji not only has visited those places personally to offer heartfelt tributes to the memories of those warriors or soldiers but has also made sincere endeavours to make others aware about the history of those places. The title of this book "Patriotic Pilgrimage of India" in itself suggests that this book will apprise us with the gallant stories of our committed warriors. This effort is not only unique but also is highly commendable, for which I congratulate Rishi Raj ji and sincerely hope that the younger generation of our country would go through this book so that they can know about the great wars of India, their history, the places associated with them and the great warriors. They should be able to appreciate the price paid for acquiring and maintaining Independence, the air of freedom which they breathe. Although we cannot repay the price by any means, yet at least be able to pay our homage, gratitude, and regards to the memories of those warriors. Thus, we can fulfill some of our responsibilities. Rishi Raj ji has started the book spanning the period from the revolution of 1857 and justifiably ended it with the Kargil War. He has narrated deeds of valour displayed by Mangal Pandey, Bhagat Singh, Udhham Singh, Ramprasad Bismil, Chandrashekhar Azad, Somnath Sharma, Shaitan Singh, Nirmaljeet Singh Saikhon, Arjan Singh, Sam Manekshaw, Manoj Kumar Pandey, Vikram Batra and numerous other warriors have been brought in this book altogether - making the book very useful. I bow down to all the warriors, martyrs, their families and with these words, conclude and once again comment Rishi Raj ji for this book. Preface The history of our country stands witness to the fact that in pursuit of affirming our greatness, we had to for centuries, or dare we say different ages. This struggle does not last a year or two, but for about 600 years. First it was the Mughals and then the English who ruled. In our perpetual struggle for freedom, thousands of well-known warriors have deposited their lives and the sacrifices of many unheard revolutionary freedom fighters have gone unnoticed. Their names, their sacrifices (7 were lost over time). In the fight for freedom - each of them contributed to their mite by making continuous efforts in their own distinct ways, following their own opinions or doctrines. Although their ways and means could be different, their goal was the same - that's achieving independence and freedom. About 7.5 people have sacrificed their lives to achieve this goal without even taking care of their families. As a result of their struggle, A arrived the lucky day when we could see the Sun of the LibertA set at midnight. After independence, we also had to fight those people who were once part of our nation. We shared the same heritage, the same language and fought together for the same goal. But over time, when circumstances changed, our goals also changed and we were asked to stand against each other. At this point, you must have recognized the nation referred to here. The last war with Pakistan was fought in Kargil. This war was one of the greatest examples of treason. On the one hand, where our Prime Minister was shaking hands to promote peace in Lahore, on the other hand, Pakistan has falsely taken control of the Kargil hills. It is completely incomprehensible that, despite losing to India every time in the past, India is not ready to learn its lessons. The biggest wound' was inflicted by another country who, singing Bhai-Bhai, stabbed us back. The agony of 55 years still persists in our country. The fight and the conflict, They began in 1857 in Barrackpore and Meerut and, later, followed by the Kashmir War in 1947, the war with China in 1962, the wars with Pakistan in 1965, 1971 and 1999, the common thing of all was that our valiant warriors sacrificed everything they owned, including the supreme sacrifice of their lives, without any rancor. Undoubtedly they did so with sole aim - safeguard dignity and the population of our country A no one can doubt this in any way. The question that is posed is what have we given them in return? Did we treat them with the respect they deserved? Most of the time, we received an answer, we were unable to grant the due respect A that as a grateful nation should be given to them. As time passes, as new generations emerge one after - other, we tend somehow to forget the great deeds of these forgotten warriors. We should not let this continue. The only way to avoid this trend A'o to make current and future generations aware of the valuable stories of warriors, freedom fighters, revolutionaries and even the places related to them, inspire the most' young people to visit those places of supreme sacrifices to pay homage, respect and gratitude. The of book is an attempt in this direction: to make the generation of today fully aware of the architects of India who have made extreme sacrifices to protect our Homeland, thus facilitating our breathing in free environment. I firmly believe that every Indian owes the contribution of all these revolutionary, freedom fighters whose debts cannot be repaid in any way, but we can relieve them by visiting these sacred places, meeting their families and spreading awareness among the younger generation. In this book, I was able to provide details of about 50 of these places associated with martyrs and patriots. Therefore, readers are invited to share this book with all sections of the society, especially with children and young adults. I have sincerely tried to refer to the literature available, to the internet and to the concerned people residing in these places for any information provided in this book. If there are still factual errors, I apologise in advance. I am confident and sincerely hope that you will enjoy my efforts. I would consider myself successful in my endeavor, if only you would be inspired to visit at least one place mentioned in this book and pay homage to the martyrs.  Content and sample pages  Pages **
